Guidance and definitions

Please note that each policy instrument requires a separate submission. If you wish to submit several policy instruments please do so using separate Word files.

Definitions:

Policy instruments: for sustainable consumption and production refer to the national plans and strategies adopted to support the shift to sustainable consumption and production practices, as well as to the means – methodologies, measures or interventions – that are used to achieve the objectives set in such plans and strategies. Such policy instruments are designed and implemented to reduce the environmental impacts of consumption and production patterns, with a view of generating economic and/or social benefits.

Examples: national strategies/action plans, new institutions, laws, regulations, standards, enforcement measures, taxes and tax incentives, grants, preferential loans, sectoral partnerships, codes of conduct, CSR initiatives, etc.

Entities considered: Governments / public entities making progress in developing, adopting, or implementing policy instruments aimed at supporting the shift to SCP.

Policy instrument reporting: policy instruments already reported through previous reporting cycles can only be reported if significant progress has been achieved.

Do not report under this activity: as per definition above, and although they can be linked, a policy instrument is not the same thing as a change in practice, a high-level commitment, a coordination mechanism, a monitoring and reporting mechanism, or a knowledge resource or tool. For instance, monitoring frameworks do not have the status of policy instruments but are rather used to monitor implementation of these. New monitoring or assessment of a policy can be considered as progress along the policy cycle and be reported as such.
